Millions visit cemeteries to pay respects to their dead

MILLIONS across the Philippines swapped relatives' portraits to pay their respects to their dead in an annual tradition that combined Catholic religious rites with the country's pre-Hispanic ancestor worship.

At Manila's Loyola Memorial Park, families swapped overnight, packed tents and brought in food for a daylong All Saints' Day picnic by the graves and stacks of their dead, just like in other cemeteries.

One of the major problems at Loyola was the huge number of vehicles inside, one of the few cemeteries in the capital where cars are allowed.

"About 80 percent of the requests went to us here at the parking booth were about parking problems," said Jonathan Sevilla.

"The other 20 percent were about missing IDs."

New Jersey bore brunt of superstorm

HOBOKEN, New Jersey—New Jersey was reeling on Wednesday from the impact of Superstorm "Sandy," which has caused catastrophic flooding here in Hoboken and in other New York City suburbs, destroyed entire neighborhoods across the state and ripped out entire households in three towns that had inhabited generations of transplants.

Though the storm raged up the East Coast, it has become increasingly apparent that New Jersey took the brunt of it. Officials estimated that the state suffered nearly billions of dollars in property damage. About a quarter of the state's population—more than 2 million people—remained without power on Wednesday, and more than 6,000 were still in shelters, state emergency officials said.

AGRARIAN REFORM

5-year extension of CARP sought

By Leticia B. Salaverria

THE LAWMAKERS are seeking a five-year extension of the agrarian reform law expiring in June 2014, saying the Aquino administration is far from meeting its objectives of completing land acquisition and distribution.

The House bill that would extend to 2019 as well as strengthen the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP), filed last month by Representative Rufin Rodriguez of Cuyayan de Oro and his brother Mariano of Zamboanga, has been referred to the committee on agrarian reform.

In their explanatory note to House Bill No. 6614, the lawmakers said the program had yet to fully meet its objectives 25 years after it was implemented by President Aquino's mother, democracy icon Corason Aquino.

For example, the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) is far from fulfilling its 2012 target of processing 100,000 hectares of Militant labor groups demand living, not 'libing' wage

By Lisa C. Ramirez

LIBING? Not living wage

This was how militant and leftist groups described the 10 percent PSC increase in the cost-of-living allowance (COLA) for minimum wage earners in Metro Manila, a schoolbook effort, possibly.

"No wonder the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) implemented this late in time for the first time (over 300,000)!" shouting on their recent Christmas call to employers.

Grumbling said the hike is for 100,000 workers in the private sector, and the 900,000 mostly living wage earner in the government sector.

"The present 'libing' pay a lot of living wage, it's a living wage. Who can't live the wage of the dead, but not the wage like," he said in Manila, adding that most employers do not implement the minimum wage law.

Perfect living

"The change of the implementation of the PSC Code for Minimum Wage Region workers happens. Through unions wage hikes and COLAs, the government has been keeping a government workers' wage for a living wage," added Eusebio Flores, a Union Union Worker Union.

The PSC hike represents the second round of the COLA granted by the Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Board-National Capital Region (RTWPB-NCR) setting to daily minimum wage workers in Metro Manila.

"This raises the daily minimum wage in the RTWPB to P140 from P130. Only in a total of P100. For other industries, however, the daily minimum wage will be P140 (over pay plus P10 COLA), in a P140 daily minimum wage rate," said Labor Secretary Rosendo Balido.

It can be recalled that the RTWPB-NCR conducted a minimum wage hike of P10 in 2012, through the issuance of PSC Order No. 162-17 on Feb. 28, 2012.

The first of the two rounds cost effect last June, thereby granting an additional P10 COLA, however, he said. Manila workers.

According to the DOLE, around 700,000 minimum wage earners in the country benefit from the COLA hike.

All-encompassing

"The wage in most cases all minimum wage earners in the private sector in the RTWPB, regardless of their position, designation or status of employment and acceptance of the method in which they worked."

On the other hand, domestic helpers, persons employed in the personal service of families, including family drivers, and workers of self-employed domestic help in business establishments are exempted from the requirement.

Aside from the RTWPB-NCR, 30 other RTWPBs have issued wage increases this year.

In the RTWPB of CAR, Region 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10 and ARMM.

Butler noted that the new wage orders already contain the features of the proposed wage system, one of the most important DOLE guidelines.

"Within the proposed 10 percent, all wage boards must have already implemented the proposed wage system," he said.

Butler encouraged companies to develop and implement productivity improvement programs in addition to their wage compliance with the minimum wage law, noting that is the second rate component of the two-tier wage system, a voluntary productivity-based pay for additional always the three steps.

Politicians as endorsers: There ought to be a law, 2 solons say

By Christian K. Esguerra

ONE SENATOR endorses a product, another endorses a restaurant, while another is the face of a computer software. Two others have appeared in advertisements commercially promoting drug products.

So what's wrong with politicians working as product endorsers?

A lot, according to two members of the House of Representatives who have filed a bill seeking to restrict public officials, whether elected or appointed, who engage in product advertising, especially one for drug companies.

Under House Bill No. 2071, such officials would be removed from office, disqualified from holding any elective office, removed from office, or suspended "for any position in the next election." They would also be stripped with a "fine" of an amount not less than double the amount of the value of the advertisement.

"Whereas certain public officials may have been doing advertisement for commercial products," said Representative Ruffalo and Mariano Rodriguez in the explanation note to HB 2071.

Bills penalizing 'grave' offenses resurrected

By Herman Barahona and Leticia Salazar

THE TRAGEDY of the death of the late Senator Ruffalo has resurrected bills that seek to penalize public officials for grave offenses. The bills were introduced in the House of Representatives in 2011.

In the House, the senators on justice and human rights, is proposing to reinstate an almost identical bill filed by Sen. Ruffalo in 2011. This bill seeks to penalize public officials for grave offenses, such as murder, rape, kidnapping, and other crimes.

In the House of Representatives, a pending bill filed by Sen. Ruffalo in 2011 seeks to penalize public officials for grave offenses, such as murder, rape, kidnapping, and other crimes.

"The fact remains that these advertisements give them similar advantage over other prospective candidates. Further, they may lose confidence of voters should an investigation be conducted by them on the products they are endorsing," he said.

'In any form or medium'

The proposed law bans the endorsement or advertisement by a government official of "any product or service in any form or medium."

One of the prominent security executives among the potential candidates, Sen. Francis Escudero, has a number of product endorsements under his name. He is the "brand ambassador" of Fractalworks. He received funding for a security device from Fractalworks last July.

Escudero also appears to be endorsing a computer school, a clinic, a restaurant, and an herbal supplement.

Sen. Bong Beraña, a member who also claims to endorse a restaurant, also endorses a computer university. In the past, Sen. Antonio Capistrano and Sen. Loren Legarda have appeared in commercially for drug products.

Assembly Rep. Juan Edgardo Reyes, who is running for senator under the administration ticket, has appeared in food supplement ads that include his father, outgoing Sen. Edgardo Reyes, and his wife.

Other potential candidates have also come up with their own TV commercials, without necessarily endorsing a particular commercial product.

Sen. Ruffalo filed his bill as an encouraging move to regulate while Congress is in session in one month. His bill is pending in the Senate.

Sen. Ruffalo, a leader of the congressional reform party, has been running under the ruling Liberal Party coalition. He is a member of the Senate Committee on Government Administration, which oversees the Senate's internal operations.

The bill's enactment could prevent the President from endorsing a commercial product. It could also prevent a member of Congress from endorsing a commercial product.

Storm allows Obama to show that he's a president in charge

Romney subdued; Obama clings to narrow lead

ATLANTIC CITY, NEW JERSEY—In a close and bitterly fought campaign for president, it was a day of contrasts: President Barack Obama joined New Jersey's Republican governor to tour storm-ravaged areas, while election rival Mitt Romney was relegated to a subdued day of rallies in Florida.

The devastation wrought by massive snow landslides along Obama's path in a series of a presidential campaign in a state of crisis. The polls in days before the election, he is fighting in polls against one Republican, Romney whose recent momentum may be slowing.

The Electoral college, a bulwark of the system in New Jersey with Governor Chris Christie, a high-profile Romney supporter who has nevertheless praised Obama's leadership in the last two days for handling the storm well.

With Christie on his side, Obama promised quick recovery.

"We're not going to tolerate red tape, we're not going to tolerate bureaucracy," he said.

In contrast, Romney was seen as a disaster.

"We really impeded us here the president of the United States acknowledge all the suffering that's going on here in New Jersey and I appreciate it very much," he said, but "what's the problem here is the 'compassion'."

His criticism was all the more relevant because Obama's storm relief efforts have been praised by Romney.

OBAMA (left, right) walks in a neighborhood after the storm damage done by Hurricane Sandy in Brigantine, New Jersey, on Oct. 31, 2012. New Jersey Governor Chris Christie stands behind Obama.

Obama's campaign has been seen as a disaster. In the case of the storm, it was a day of contrasts: Obama's leadership in the last two days for handling the storm well.

With Christie on his side, Obama promised quick recovery.

"We're not going to tolerate red tape, we're not going to tolerate bureaucracy," he said.

In contrast, Romney was seen as a disaster.

A Reuters/Ipsos national online tracking survey, the most often cited, had Obama at 47 percent to 44 percent for Romney.

The study says Obama took a hit in favor of the more heavily damaged areas, but Obama holds a slight edge in two of them. The online survey, from pollster Obama's lead by a percentage point in Ohio and a point in Virginia. The race on December 18 in Florida, and Romney leads by 1 percentage point in Colorado.

Romney's poll, by Quinnipiac University's CBS News, showed Obama with a slight lead within the margin of error in Virginia and Florida, and a slight edge over Romney in the oil-rich Gulf Coast of Ohio.

A Romney win in Ohio would make his electoral path very difficult, and his campaign has cited new polls in recent days in Democratic-leaning Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin.

US election to cost $6B

WASHINGTON—United States political campaigns will spend $6 billion in total this year, making the 2012 election the most expensive yet in American history, reports an analysis by the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics.

The presidential election pitting President Barack Obama against the Republican challenger, Mitt Romney, alone accounts for $2.8 billion, according to the Center for Responsive Politics, which analyzes US electoral spending at www.opencampaigns.org.

That's a decrease from the record-breaking 2008 campaign year of $2.9 billion, when Obama had to also finance a Democratic primary fight against Hillary Clinton.

The total includes spending by presidential candidates and major party committees—about $2 billion—$120 million from outside groups that report spending to federal authorities and $140 million from party committees, but excludes and public funding for the national conventions.

Overall, the 2012 election is set to top the last mass expenditure—$4.2 billion—by about $700 million, due to increased spending by outside groups and a record number of individuals and organizations making "independent contributions," said Center for Responsive Politics executive director John H. Garvey.

The cost also allows these groups to raise additional amounts of money from donors, and the expenditures have been spreading as rapidly as income taxes.

Spending by each group is set against Obama's and Romney's lead. Obama's lead is $10 million per week in early September to $10 million per week in early October to $10 million during the week beginning October 11.

Conservative organizations, including tea-party groups and so-called Super PACs political action committees—largely financed by their donors—continue to raise money.

Bigger allocation eyed for solar, wind projects

By Amy R. Rorro

THE DEPARTMENT OF Energy is planning to reallocate the installation targets among the renewable energy sources in favor of the more expensive solar and wind power projects. Energy Undersecretary Jose Loring II issued the public notice, but such an action would not increase the total to 2,000 MW allocated in the national grid to be selected from all power companies for the use of renewable energy facilities. Beyond the allocation of 1,000 MW per annum from 2010,

Why Octavia Spencer, Mo'Nique, Kim Kardashian and Kate Beckinsale go for Tadashi Shoji

By Cheche N. Mond

FOR A MAN who has made a career making clothes for "real women," it's somewhat bewildering to hear Tadashi Shoji crying in admiration for another Japanese fashion designer

"The dress to be wearable. It's not just for the critics and the press. It's for every woman" whose aesthetic is the precise opposite of his own.

"Usually I don't like Comme (de Garçon), but this fall season, this is absolutely genius design," he said, his eyes lighting up as he gushed about Rei Kawakubo's latest paper-doll avant collection for Fall 2012.

"It's like this, don't really impress me, but that was so genius

When I saw that, [I thought] who could wear that shape? That structure? That idea? Underwear?"

Fall collection

Shoji was in Manila last week to promote his Fall 2012 collection on the occasion of Benakid, where his line has been sold for the last 19 years.

The Los Angeles-based designer mentioned these demands during the visit to meet with the Philippine Nationalist Front.

Shog. It might not be a fan of Kawakita, a few years his senior and famous for avant-garde, deconstructed designs. But the Sonos, Japan-born fashion designer, who gained a lot of the media attention in this year's Hollywood trends season, did profess love for another Japanese designer: Issey Miyake. And it's not just the clothes that are loved.

“The designers who are stressed to women’s needs,” Shep said. “When I look at a designer’s clothes, I think this guy’s hot, he understands women, the consumer’s need. Or, this guy’s hot, we control that. I hope I can see other designers differently. I’d say my assistant, I hope I’m not but like this designer. That’s the scarier part! ‘Fashion’s hot!’ Then it’s just business!”

That doesn't mean likely to happen anytime soon. Shoji, who set up his magazine lab in Thailand in 1982, is still asking on the money generated by the Curve 2012 bid. He dived up Supporting Actors winner Dennis Spencer ("The Ugly"), who landed on Curve because he'd dressed hot.

Sporex is fun, worn throughout the summer season, the plasticizer allows getting pools such as from fashion prints. They get the clothes off the rack. T-shirt that is available in 1,000 colors in 40 countries, including US department stores Wal-Mart and Toys 'R Us.

Moral impact

"Before the Oscars, she was just buying off the rack," Ship said. "On the Golden Globe, that was the first custom-made dress. She made it on her best-dressed list. After that one, she began asking for different dresses. I started to buy an Oscar dress and the next is."

"But then they said she was probably going to want a bigger name after she started winning. And then she went on So the Game and she won again," he added, hovers.

ing 18 more affordable replicas of Spencer's design sold every day, about 750,000 plus, a total of 10 million. The original custom dress that cost over $5,000. The clothes at Spencer's total from $12,000 to about $90,000.)

Spencer is, however, not the first actress to wear a Jinkals shop dress and bag on Once Upon a Time. At the 2010 Academy Awards, another shopper, actress McQueen, checked her supporting actress Oscar ("Oscar") in a blue silk jersey dress by the American designer.

That same year, Chase first became acquainted with Catherine Stille, who wore Tahiti Blue throughout the awards season, including at the Oscars.

shows they're as comfortable. When they're comfortable, they come back."

Artistic development: artist

Shoji was a painter who studied Fine Arts in Tokyo before moving to LA to study fashion in the '70s.

"Details I pay attention to," he said. "My temperament is that of an artist. It takes time to create a painting. After sketching, transfer the pattern and then make it. So that I started my own business, I made all my own patterns. After two to three days, the dress will come out. My temperament is suited to this profession."

Even as president of his own firm, Shoy has not yielded his sketchpad to another page.

"I design, I do patient education, I interview, and I do the research, all that stuff. Unlike other designers, I do everything. Others just sketch and give the work to others."

To be clear, Tsubaki Shoji doesn't rest all in the Okinawa Springs and Kimchi traditions of the world; simple rice cakes (aka Bato Bokkondae and Bary Bokkondae) also find their way in the restaurant's menu. In fact, the label is the old and famous of the Miso Udon and Miso Udon (see page 100).

They spend half of the year in Shanghai where he's expanding his China business. (This year, it spent two boutiques, in Shanghai and in the capital; last year we set to open next year). Headquarters remain in L.A., while he has showrooms in New York, Tokyo and Beijing.

In Japan, his clothes are sold in top department stores like Mitsukoshi and Isetan, and high-end boutiques. He travels throughout Southern Asia (especially to visit markets). The clothes are also sold in the Middle East, but he doesn't adjust his designs to suit specific markets.

The clothes are made in the USA and China

"Everybody asks me that, what's distinctively Japanese about me," he said with a chuckle. "I think it's the work ethic. I give value to the clothes. That's maybe the Japanese way."

He added, "My company policy is that it does to be wearable. It's not just for the artist and the press. It's for every woman. Every woman can enjoy life for two or three hours in a beautiful dress. The fanciest party and happy. It's not help her feel that way when she's wearing it alone."

TechnoMarine and Philippine Coast Guard Trade-Up

They put their faces to work those who use in distress of sea—now doing otherwise.

They risk their lives against hostile elements to protect that every sea voyage will be safe and secure from harm or threat.

They risk their lives when they expose themselves to toxic and hazardous substances to control and mitigate pollution of our sea environment arising from other man-made or natural disasters.

They are the men of the Philippine Coast Guard and this brave one-ship mission. To promote safety of life and property at sea, safeguard marine environment and resources, and carry out applicable laws within the Philippine waters, and conduct maritime security operations and other activities in support of national development.

"Not as many people know that Coast Guard is a multi-mission maritime service, where its personnel also perform their best on the line in the performance of their respective duties," said Lt. Col. Dabao, Vice Commander for Administration of the Philippine Coast Guard.

A day's work of a Coast Guard is similar to a soldier's preparation for deployment. "Philippines is not an island in a sea," he said. "The challenges of its personnel, a coast guard personnel himself to be ready enough to perform under assigned tasks and ensure the successful completion of Philippine Coast Guard mission," the Vice Commander for Administration said.

With the increasingly complexity of the maritime conditions, the trust, insight and judgment of the Philippine Coast Guard has never been more important.

It is unfortunate, however, that the Philippine Coast Guard does not receive the recognition that they deserve. In spite of this, however, they continue to accept the pressure for their small, unassuming, and under-resourced, and vision. TechnoMarine has performed on with the Philippine Coast Guard. For TechnoMarine, recognition is the call, not the recognition. This year, TechnoMarine introduces its latest innovation in promotional watches to date, made in an old TechnoMarine watch and level up to a new watch model.

Through this initiative TechnoMarine invites its customers to join in and make a difference while still enjoying the perks of being a TechnoMarine patron. For one-guarantee discount monthly, give your old TechnoMarine watch in the outstanding Coast Guard of the Philippines, and receive, TechnoMarine will give you a 40% off any new 2012 watch models. Item donations, exclusive, TechnoMarine watches are available to be traded in for being on the back side and replacement one item.

Collected watches will go to the Philippine Coast Guard. With the brand equity of TechnoMarine is having to have with sales, performance time, selling and with a being very current and relevant, the partnership with the Philippine Coast Guard looks to be a very good watch.

"The success of time to any Coast Guardians partners to how TechnoMarine a response can be made to a particular situation," said the Vice Commander of the Philippine Coast Guard.

In essence, time is a gift of responsibility between a situation and response. The shorter the time is the chance of a successful situation will be high, the longer the time the probability of a disaster getting worse will be high as well.

The TechnoMarine Trade-Up process is from October 1 to October 31 2012.

THE NO.1 Live basketball game in the Philippines.

Let's hear it for NCAA basketball

This was a season that was definitely for the history books

By Ray Sison Jr.
Senior Correspondent, In La Salle University

THE NCAA has always been known as the "other college league," always living in the shadow of the more popular UAAP. Little do people know that the older generations still claim that the NCAA was the top college league of their time.

Things haven't changed much—the NCAA has a good name, but so has the UAAP. The UAAP has been under the spotlight for a long time, and the other league, which is impacted with history from elimination games. The final four of the NCAA barely gets enough attention.

Now, a whole new game is being played. MTV and ABC recently got hold of the TV rights for the NCAA, and they were reportedly getting higher ratings than the other league being aired on Studio 23. The good part here is that the time slot is never mid- or late-afternoon, because it is on prime time. This could mean that even those who are not students who have nothing better to watch could switch channels and are one of the more popular sports in the country. This data could have reinforced a lot of its rise in ratings—the basketball fans who arrive home from work or school.

The new line of the NCAA is much better than before. A lot of people expected the season to be just the same, with the stronger teams holding on to their spots.

Let's hear it for NCAA basketball

For most of the season, with nothing much happening, but they were now surprised with this one. The fact is, the games don't always turn out as expected.

Surprise

This example was the game between San Beda and University of Perpetual Help where, in the last few seconds of the last quarter, Sweet Jesus of San Beda drove a final three from half court, which tied the game and sent it into overtime. University of Perpetual Help ended up winning the game, in the process of some basketball fun.

On the topic of some notable players, Arni Vidal put on a show this week, shooting from the three-point range the whole season and even putting in a buzzer-beating shot and score. Kerie Ma, with his much-improved performance, came up with a 41-point game against San Sebastian in game 1 of the semifinals, posting a lot of noise.

Speaking of noise, the crowd is the NCAA has gotten way more intense. The old truth is, the NCAA crowd had been considered tame, or as the "jazz" crowd, sometimes you're away in some school district—fans from other schools might hang up on you. Maybe they were just looking at it all wrong. The crowd schools longer not just for a win, but they also want to hear their supporters, know that they're loud, ruling it in their fans because they have every right to do so, that means more pressure for the players on court.

People just have to understand that the competitive nature of the NCAA was not meant to be compared with that of the UAAP. But maybe people cannot help but be involved in the heated battle of these schools. That also includes online opinions and comments made by students, alumni and faculty. That happens in every league. Most of the people who watch the game live and on tv are watch and sometimes they discuss strategy with their feelings about their school winning.

This was a season that was definitely for the history books. The first game was between San Beda College and Colegio de San Juan de Los Rios, who fought not only to win the championship, but to finally break down 13-0 in the final. San Beda's basketball series won, San Beda ended up winning in a very close game showing by blowing away their opponent in game 2 of the finals as well.

A few hours afterward, the Internet once specifically, Facebook was filled with intense scenes, some from the basketball community congratulating the teams. The following part was seeing the Luttera season Facebook page showing so much disappointment before the end of the finals.

What changed that for everyone was a Luttera member who posted a picture of the Beda crowd, and in a more that can send people, that the school for an exciting final series and told his fellow Luttera members to have better they could stay their school spirit. That was a good sign of things to come, considering that the BPC-CSD match up was a close five years back.

The NCAA definitely put on a good show this season. People may want to watch and hear for talent from this league.

'Strictly formal' gets redefined

By Larry Levitt
Contributor

STRICTELY LAST Tuesday night, there was a distinct genre change in the way high society dressed, behaved and behaved was watched. It was the annual Red Cross Ball, but the theme called it simply Red, and Manila's 500 most stylish were ready to rewrite the rules of behavior and etiquette. One look at Vera Valdez and Lynn Tila, the society elite, and you would be more than a little bit confused about the proceedings and not the

At this year's Red Cross Ball, both the featured designer and the elegant guests opted for beauty in simplicity designer guests. Some said it was long that the Red Cross Ball was so formal (it was not) but for years it had been going to show off the latest fashion from something completely different.

'Couture de force'

Ballgowns did not disappear, and delivered a 'couture de force' collection of pleated, silk and draped soft organza in black and white. With his overwhelming, he has drawn out all social, headwork and personality. Tonight's new party was not just a new look, it was a new look—a grand departure from his signature style. It was more the way, again by every other design element.

As if it was collectively decided, the ball of the ball was to be a new look. They are elegant, very well-dressed, there are those that are hard to look together in the same society. But perhaps do not lie, as look at these ladies signaling the dawn of a new age of ease, of the sense of actually having fun when going to a gala. It's not just a new look, it's a new look.

The International Red Cross Ball celebrates its 50th year this year—definitely the pinnacle of goodwill and high society in our evolving society. It's only distinguished experience in dressing to celebrate, with society gathering together to raise funds to honor the Red Cross and celebrate the strength of the human spirit.

FRENCHESKA FARR

I LEARNED about E. L. James' "Fifty Shades of Grey" on television. It's a bestseller and I hear that Hollywood producers are searching for the perfect book for a movie adaptation. It's an adult version of "Twilight." I recommend it because it's not the usual love story. The guy is a bit psychotic. I was hesitant because the story is so good, but I read it and I kept me guessing what would happen next. Unlike other books, this one just kept surprising me, making it more fun to read. It's a book that fans are more into it. People that are into it are, not to mention, it's a book that fans are more into it. Lea Salonga 'very excited' to see who the next Kim will be

LOS ANGELES—Singing she is "very excited" to see who the next Kim will be in next year's Miss Filipinas. Lea Salonga also told us she is "scared" that Cameron Mackintosh and his team have decided to hold another Miss Filipinas.

In an e-mail interview, the very-late Miss awarded only enthusiasm about the Manila episode on Nov. 17 and 18. She just finished a successful run of the stage musical "Miss Saigon" about 1975-1976 American war-torn Saigonese-American men forced into concentration camps during World War II—at The Old Globe in San Diego, California.

She grabbed the chance to ask Lea about her cousin, George Takai, who is, at 75, one of the most successful actors. He is a social media superstar whose appeal spans many generations of fans. George's Facebook account, where he posts the most amazing photos, tattoos and more up there, has a staggering 2.8 million "likes." According to Lea, George is determined to bring "Miss Saigon" to Broadway. He keeps this happen.

Lea updated us on her other "Miss Saigon" roles: Billy Tanaka, and her daughter Nicole. Below an exception to our interview with the commanding performer who promises to replace her role in "Lord of the Flies."

What are your thoughts on Cameron Mackintosh holding Manila auditions for the final final round of "Miss Saigon"?

Oh my goodness, I'm excited! The Philippines was a wellspring of talent for many of the "Miss Saigon" performers in Europe (London, Glasgow, Amsterdam). I'm very happy that Cameron has decided to return to the Philippines to find talent for the final final round. Of course I'm very excited to find out who'll be cast as Kim.

Tips on food and wine pairing

A good match will bring out the best in food and enhance the flavors and unique characteristics of both the food and the wine. Memorable food and wine pairing is achieved when you find the similarities and/or contrasts of flavor, body (texture), intensity, and aroma.

More or less, don't serve over the perfect food and wine pairing. The best pairing is a good food, good wine and good company. Friends and loved ones are the most important to good meals. They begin with some of those regional rules-of-thumb to use as guidelines, and then follow that with a discussion of why certain flavors are found in, or are more characteristic to certain areas.

Ten rules-of-thumb for food and wine pairing

1. If you are taking notes in a food and wine journal, don't miss anything about the wine or the food you are having. Record the date, time, location, and the weather. It will be a good idea to have a good wine, a good food, and a good weather. It will be a good idea to have a good wine, a good food, and a good weather.
2. When you are eating, don't drink too much.

one wine at a time. It's common to see a waiter who has been told to serve a certain wine to a guest who has been told to serve a certain wine. It's common to see a waiter who has been told to serve a certain wine to a guest who has been told to serve a certain wine.

3. Balance food intensity. The lighter the food, the lighter the wine. The heavier the food, the heavier the wine. The lighter the food, the lighter the wine. The heavier the food, the heavier the wine.

4. Consider the food's texture. The smoother the food, the smoother the wine. The rougher the food, the rougher the wine. The smoother the food, the smoother the wine. The rougher the food, the rougher the wine.

5. Match the wine's intensity. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food.

6. Match the wine's texture. The smoother the wine, the smoother the food. The rougher the wine, the rougher the food. The smoother the wine, the smoother the food. The rougher the wine, the rougher the food.

Regional foods and wines, long-developed together over time, often have a natural affinity for each other. It is a common European custom to drink wine that is served by the food. In the United States, it is common to drink wine that is served by the food. In the United States, it is common to drink wine that is served by the food.

7. Consider the wine's intensity. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food.

8. Match the wine's texture. The smoother the wine, the smoother the food. The rougher the wine, the rougher the food. The smoother the wine, the smoother the food. The rougher the wine, the rougher the food.

9. Match the wine's intensity. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food. The lighter the wine, the lighter the food. The heavier the wine, the heavier the food.

Look good, feel good with Jockey Shapewear

By Just Wings

GOOD underwear is just one ingredient in the recipe for successful behavior, especially for women. Aside from looking good and feeling good, one can feel more confident when she wears healthy, long, warm, and regular and get a good amount of sleep.

Introducing the Jockey Shapewear, Jockey's new beautifully slimming shapewear which comes with natural curves, comes in available late in that can at second size, and with long edges that help eliminate her under clothes.

The Slip Shaper is a body-hugging slip dress designed to smooth down curves from the bust and the lines. Made from a combination of soft, stretchable fabric, it provides extra coverage where women wear dresses and skirts that become sheer under strong lighting. Comfort is an important factor too, the material is smooth so that it can be worn as a night gown.

Another favorite is the High Waist to Mid-Thigh Brief, a powerful shaper that creates a smooth mid-section while flattening tummy curves. It has the ability to completely do the double duty.

A regular use of Jockey Shapewear is model Sandra Phua, also the only proprietor of Phua's in the City, a growing business for women's underwear.

She knows exactly when to look for a good body shaper. "Make sure it fits you like a second skin," she advises. "It should be snug, but not constricting. Do the constrict if it's too loose, then it defeats the purpose of wearing it in the first place."

As for the color, Sandra suggests buying one that blends well with your clothes. "Choose between nude and black," she adds. "You can wear nude under pretty much any color."

A graduate of Business Colleges, her says she stays in a line of women, mature, mature and modeling. She's constantly working on new projects for Phua's and thinking about new ways to delight her customers.

She also writes a food column for a daily newspaper in other local publications, and is a frequent at food events. She mentions being grateful for shapewear sales that a mission, and is grateful for every minute she spends doing what she loves.

To make up, Sandra never leaves her shapewear in the closet. She always wears a smooth evening dress, but since her work requires her to constantly meet with people, she often has to be dressing well, which is why she wears her shapewear in her closet.

"If I'm feeling stressed and nothing else, I know my Jockey Shapewear will help me feel confident and in a good mood," she says. "It helps me feel more confident and in a good mood."

Choose three degrees of hotness for underwear

By Phyllis Balaban

AS LITTLE push-up or lift-up can help boost the confidence of women who wish they were a bit well-endowed. Many women resort to push-up bras instead of going under the body because they are most-chosen.

And to be the original push-up bra, it was sold in the market, Wonderbra was finally introduced to the Philippine market with a very fashion show held recently in Manila at the Manila Grand Hotel.

"It was the right time for the Philippines to experience the wonderbra because it was the first time they enjoyed the benefits of wearing the original push-up bra," said Gail Mendenhall, marketing manager of Wonderbra Philippines.

Wonderbra is one of the little products under the brand. It is now marketed in Canada, sold as early as 1975 and was introduced to the United States in 1994 under a different brand name.

"Wonderbra focuses on fashion and building a woman's confidence," Mendenhall said. "It is important that when purchasing a bra always consider the fit because anything that doesn't fit will only make the situation worse long-term, quality of materials, and comfort."

Wonderbra offers women with large busts, medium busts, and small busts. It is well-known for its marketing, practical women should always make sure their color and style are in tune, black and white, because they go with any garment while and braless under any outfit.

Wonderbra calls the Wonderbra riffs "Three Degrees of Hotness" which allow women to choose how much coverage they want to "have." The first degree or hot gives a light push-up effect that is more noticeable, second degree or three gives maximum push-up, and third degree or full gives a full push-up effect that is more noticeable than the first.

Each degree has its own collection that women can choose from to collect. First degree or the first is a light push-up effect with a light push-up effect that is more noticeable than the first.

Second degree or the second is a light push-up effect with a light push-up effect that is more noticeable than the first.
